Report on the GFHS Presentation

On November 3, five members of the Honor Guard showed up for a day of presentations at Great Falls High School. Members involved were Norman Anderson, Dugan Coburn, Lee Ebeling, Darian Kath, and Ron Ukrainetz.

We all arrived somewhere around 7:30 and set up four different stations: weapons, navigation and mapping, medicine, and fire starting and military drill. We had classes seven different periods, and we had an extra class in sports medicine as well. Because of numbers in the high schools, there was only one class per period except when the sports medicine class came down. For that presentation, Darian and Norman presented for about 35 minutes and then gave the standard medicine talk to the entire Montana Government class. The rest of the time, we worked with groups between 5 and 10.

Having five people meant that no one had to work terribly hard, and we had time to rotate between the different stations. The kids were well-behaved, and GFH provided us with a nice lunch. We were packed up and gone by 3:30. It was probably one of our best days of presentation at the high schools.
